What is Qi Men Dun Jia?

What if you could forecast the outcome of a task or project before you even start it?

What if you could predict the results of a particular action before you perform it?

If you think it’s impossible, think again. All of these and more are possible with the art of Qi Men Dun Jia.
An example of Qi Men Dun Jia in China

Qi Men Dun Jia is an ancient yet practical Chinese Metaphysics art that has many applications in its use, including forecasting, destiny analysis, and warfare.

How many of you have heard of the Chinese tactician and strategist Zhuge Liang from the Three Kingdoms era?

Zhuge Liang, also known as the Sleeping Dragon, was most famous for his conduct in the Battle of Red Cliffs, where he helped his realm, Shu, obtain an alliance with Wu in order to fight off the armies of Cao Cao of Wei. During that battle, the Shu-Wu alliance wanted to make an attack using fire ships, however, the winds in the battleground were not favorable. Wu’s strategist, Zhou Yu, wanted to call the attack off, however, he was reassured by Zhuge Liang that the winds will blow in the correct direction at a specific hour.

Zhuge Liang instructed the soldiers to construct an elaborate altar, in which he would pray in order to get the winds to change. In reality, he had already used the art of Qi Men Dun Jia to foresee that the wind will start blowing the correct way at the hour he mentioned. The altar was built as a showpiece to the Wei spies and generals to convince them that something else was going on.

In the end, the strategy worked. Wu’s general, Huang Gai, was ready with his fire ships. When the direction of the winds changed, Huang Gai used his ships to set fire to the entire Wei fleet, inflicting a heavy blow. Thanks to Zhuge Liang’s usage of Qi Men Dun Jia, Wei’s attack was repulsed, giving the Shu-Wu alliance a huge victory over their rival.
Qi Men Dun Jia in Modern Day

In the same vein, QiMen can be used in the modern times for warfare, specifically, business wars.

QiMen has been used by business tycoons, CEOs, and other company heads in their business decisions, allowing them an unseen but significant advantage over their competitors.

Qi Men Dun Jia can also be applied in many other ways, but ultimately, a person who understands and implements QiMen into their daily life will be able to live happier, better and wealthier lives.
How to plot your Qimen Chart?

In order to see the forces in the 4 realms and how they interact with each other, we need to plot a QiMen chart. It uses the time and date to create a chart that represents an energy map which allows the user to calculate the energy flow.

Plotting a QiMen chart from scratch could take you months to learn and hours to do... or you could just use our online program. Here's how!
